George Rust, Salt Lake manager for R. G. Dun & Co., speaking of the situation locally, said last evening: "Jobbers in dry goods, shoes and notions did a fair business throughout the week and were well satisfied. Clothing was quieter, especially in summer lines. Retail trade needs hot weather at this time of the year and because of the unseasonably cold weather retailiers in time of the year and because of the unseasonably cold weather retailers in the city have had a quiet week. Collections were fair. Business on the whole was without features."

Real estate men report a very quiet week with very few sales of any importance, Dealers have been putting in much of their time working up the special day for Saltair, and in this way have been doing good work in the way of advertising the advantages of Salt Lake to the outside world.

Builders are active on work already under way and very few mechanics have reason to be idle. At the same time very few large buildings are being projected, and outside of those started in previous years the work is confined to small dwellings. The outlook in this line is considered good for the entire year.

Pulmonary tuberculosis, commonly called consumption, is now known to be a contagious and infectious disease, be a contagious and infectious disease, communicated by a minute germ or bacillus solely produced by some other case of the disease. It cannot exist or be acquired in any other way than by the introduction and action of this germ, called the tubercle bacillus. This fact has been positively demonstrated and is no longer disputed. The disease is therefore absolutely preventable, and because the germs are given off only in

This does not imply that a consumptive should be shunned or looked upon with fear and aversion; on the contrary, he may pursue his way with perfect safety to those about him by perfect safety to those about him by interests being the observance of simple and reasonable precautions. It is his duty to faithfully and conscientiously destroy or disinfect his expectoration. This he can and should do, both for his own sake, as he is in danger of rebreathing his own bacilli, and for the sake of the members of his family and those about him, whose lives depend upon his faithfulness.

Not Aware of Danger.

Not Aware of Danger.

Many persons who would gladly carry out the necessary precautions do not know of the danger and methods of combating it; others, and they fortunately are but few, deliberately and criminally disregard all measures involving trouble on their part and become dangerous pests to society. These should be closely watched by health authorities and severely dealt with.

There should be ordinances in all towns making it a misdemeanor to expectorate on sidewalks or floors of public buildings, cars, etc., and it is hoped that the next legislature will enact a law that will cover this offense throughout the state. At present no one can enter a church, theatre or other public place of meeting without danger of infection if he happens to be susceptible to it.

When a consumptive spits upon a floor he discharges innumerable tubercle bacilli, which, when the expectoration becomes dry, are borne in the air to be inhaled by others.

The death of Mr. Stebbins removes one of the old pioneers of the west, and a man who was probably well known one of the old pioneers of the west, and a man who was probably well known to many people in Sait Lake. He was born near Oberlin, O., but in his early days emigrated to Missouri fust at the time when the floodtide of business was reaching out into the then almost unknown west. He started in business with no capital, excepting a good college education, which he had obtained by his own individual exertion.

Realizing in advance the great needs and possibilities of the west, he conceived the idea of building a telegraph system west of St. Louis, and went to work upon the task without means. He went to Jefferson City and promised the people there a telegraph system, provided they would subscribe the money for the work and take payment in return in telegraphing at a low rate when the lines were completed. This method was received with favor and the process city. At the days emigrated to Missouri fust at the time when the floodide of building a incomprehensible than the general apathy exhibited toward a scourge that destroys 150,000 lives annually in the United States, and is responsible for the death of one-seventh of the human race. If the present mortality rate continues 10,000,000 of the people now living in the United States will inevitably die of tuberculosis, and there is no reason to hope that it will not continue, or that one out of every seven who read these lines may not be a victim of this terrible malady unless people unite in a determined stand to check its progress.

The most difficult problem to solve, which sanitarians everywhere are struggling with, is how best to arouse the people from their indifference and to induce them to become informed on the subject. There is little doubt that the members of the family and neighbors of consumptives would compet the exercise of proper care, if they could be made to realize that their lives were directly endangered by failure to do so.
